POLICE ARE AT SEA.

THEY HAVE NOT A CLUE ON WHICH TO WORK NOW.

AUSTIN MURDERERS STILL AT LARGE.

Boud and Dumas Prove Their Innocence Beyond Question, and the Washington Suspect Turns Out to Be the Wrong Man.

The Richmond police are at sea. The evidence which they thought they had to connect the two negroes, Boud and Dumas, with the murder of Policeman Austin has all been knocked into pieces, and they have not a clue now that they can follow up to lead them to the capture of the murderers.

Captain Angle was positive that Boud and Dumas were the men wanted, and they were more or less positively identified by a number of witnesses to the murder as the men who did the shooting. The men, however, stoutly maintained their innocence, and claimed to have been in Norfolk at the time the murder was committed. Two officers were sent to Norfolk to investigate their story, and every claim they had made was substantiated by evidence of both white and colored people in the City by the Sea. On Monday morning both negroes spent several hours in a shoe-shop near the Norfolk and Western depot, where Dumas was having a pair of shoes half-soled, and this fact was proven by everybody in the shop and several people in the neighborhood.

THE WASHINGTON SUSPECT.

The evidence against these negroes having been quashed, the police next turned their attention to the Washington suspect. The police of the national capital had on Saturday arrested a negro named George Clark, who answered the description of one of the murderers, and Officer Wren, who went from Richmond to get him, wired back here yesterday morning that he had been positively identified as one of the murderers. He asked that requisition papers be forwarded at once. Later in the day, however, he telephoned to Captain Angle that indubitable evidence had been secured to show that the darky was not in Richmond at the time of the murder, and hence he was turned loose.

POLICE AT SEA.

Captain Angle said last night that he had his men still at work, but hardly knew which way to turn, admitting, in fact, that he was all at sea. The police still have hopes, though, that the murderers will be apprehended, and a single stone will be left unturned by them to bring the dastards to justice.

Boud and Dumas are still in the city jail. They will have to be held until next Friday, as the case against them in the Police Court will not be heard until then, but they will undoubtedly be discharged from custody then.

RICHARD, THE FAKIR.

Was "Dead" But Could Hear—Victim of Officer Redford—Other Cases.

One of the most conspicuous unworthies among the worshippers of Justice John yesterday morning was Richard Swann, a tall negro as black as negroes grow to be. He was arrested Saturday afternoon after a chase by Policeman Everett Redford, for begging on the street and being an all-around fakir. The policeman came down Main street about 1 o'clock Saturday. He was stopping in a refreshment stand, when Sir Richard, armed with a sheet of dirty, yellow paper, saying the bearer was deaf and dumb, entreated the aid of all good people. Several persons in the store read the paper, and Mr. Redford's turn had come. Glancing at the sheet for a moment, and then at the big negro, who looked equal to being lazy enough to carry his arm in a sling, as he was doing, the experienced eye of the officer sized him up as a thoroughly fakir. He spoke to one of the young men to call up 732 over the phone and ask the Sergeant to send the patrol wagon down there. Though deaf as he was, the negro made a dart for the door. The policeman followed with about a hundred and Richard was finally overhauled near the Gallego Mills. On the way he threw from his pocket a full-grown chicken, with blade five inches in length, and carrying on the street and carrying a concealed weapon registered against him. He was required to give security in $100 for twelve months, which he refused to furnish. The world is free of him for a year, at least, and may well rejoice. Officer Redford was in citizens' clothes at the time or the why deaf, but hearing negro would not have ventured so near the dastard-line.

F. J. Brown (colored) was charged with carrying a concealed weapon, a sling-shot, and was fined $5 and given thirty days in jail.

In the case of John Nelson and Pompey Scott, charged with shooting traps in the street, the accused were fined $2.50 and costs.

Robert Fowler was charged with being a vagrant, and was ordered to the reformatory. He is a boy of 14, and claimed he was deaf.
